ABOUT ME

I'm a Computer Science graduate, and my main ambition is to tackle challenges by creating smart, digital solutions. I really enjoy the process of learning and adapting to new tech. Beyond my technical skills, I believe strong communication and working well in a team are key, which is something I've actively developed and am continuously working on, including through some life skills training. From a technical standpoint, I'm confident in building applications for both web and mobile, and I have a good understanding of areas like networking and system administration. My hands-on experience in developing real-world projects has solidified my ability to translate complex ideas into functional software, ready to contribute meaningfully from day one.
